Poliomyelitis in Jonkoping County.

Consul Fuller, at Gothenburg, reports November 29: According to information from the chief provincial physician for the county, the epidemic of poliomyelitis, which has recently ravaged Jonkoping County, has up to this date numbered 870 cases. Of those affected with the disease the majority are fully restored to health again, but a large number have also succumbed and many still suffer from lingering paralysis. Judging from the examinations made about two months ago, the number of the last-mentioned cases is estimated to be nearly 200.

In order to obtain more reliable information in the matter, the county government board has requested the respective chairmen of the vestry boards in the communities where the disease has appeared to report as soon as possible to the provincial physicians the number of persons who are still suffering from the effects of poliomyelitis and whether these persons are receiving any treatment for the effects referred to.

The county government board points out, at the same time, how important it is that the affected persons receive proper medical treatment without delay when there are lingering effects of the disease and counsels the vestry boards to see that as many patients as possible are furnished proper treatment in regular and emergency hospitals.[1]
